ABOUT THE TUTOR

I began performing at an early age, playing violin and piano, as well as singing in school and church choirs. During high school, I was actively involved as a choir director and accompanist for the Youth, Senior, and Gospel choirs at church; and Concert Choir, Vocal Jazz, and Madrigal Singers at school.

I attended Carroll University in Wisconsin, where I received my BFA in Music: Vocal Performance with a Piano Minor and a minor in Communications. Intending to be an opera singer, I changed course professionally when I began working with the Grammy Award-winning Florentine Opera Company in Milwaukee on their stage management team. I found my personality was more suited to the other side of the stage, and this took me into the world of freelance stage managing with regional opera and ballet companies, allowing me to work with international artists of the highest caliber. I also translate, write, and program supertitles (the English translation for what the singers are singing) for regional opera companies.

My husband and I currently own Captus Creative, an Emmy-nominated technical event production company based in Grand Rapids, MI, that allows me to work locally, as well as travel, while still homeschooling our two children.
